BURIAL IN BUNINYONG

The Old Burial Ground

Early settlers of Buninyong arrived in the late 1830s with the township being established around 1841. When a death occurred in those days, some persons were buried in locations where they died, such as on pastoral stations, while others were buried in a small, sloping plot of land in Learmonth Street - just to the west of where the old red brick post office still stands.

The area can be recognised by its picket fence and has signage out front.

Now known as the Old Burial Ground, it is unclear who or how many persons are buried there, as no records or headstones have survived. It was not until 1853 that formal registration of births, deaths, and marriages was introduced in Victoria.

The 'New' Cemetery

The present Cemetery located on the Midland Highway some 3 km north-west of the village (see map opposite) was included in a preliminary survey of the township of Buninyong done in 1849 by Assistant Surveyor Smythe. Referred to as the Buninyong General Cemetery, the 18-acre site, initially of 4777 plots, was divided into denominational sections.

These reflected the-then religious persuasions of the population, comprised mainly of Scottish, English and Irish miners and farmers. There were 1334 Episcopalian (Anglican) plots, 1182 Presbyterian, 1025 Wesleyan, 783 Catholic, 222 Baptist, and 231 plots designated as Independent/Other. There was also a small section of 44 plots reserved for Chinese burials.

The first recorded burial in the 'denominational' area was that of Elizabeth Gullan in August 1852, with the local doctor Dr Richard Power being buried there soon after, in December of that year.

As at mid-2022 there were 2239 persons buried in the Episcopalian section, Presbyterian (1637), Wesleyan (1723), Catholic (1299), Baptist (103), Independent (98) and Other (49) – a total of 7150 burials.

A Lawn section at the western side of the cemetery was opened in 1970, with the first burial being that of John Baker. There are 1115 burial plots in this section with only a few remaining vacant. A second Lawn section, to the east of Imperial Road (named after the nearby former large gold mine) was opened in 2020. There are 570 plots in this section. By 2022, 1803 persons had been buried in the Lawn sections.

Six garden areas for the interment of cremated remains are located adjacent to the creek. As at 2022, the ashes of some 235 persons were buried there.

Snippets of cemetery history

Anne Beggs-Sunter, Buninyong & District Historical Society

The majority of the first white settlers of this district were of Scottish descent. This can be seen by the numbers buried in the large Presbyterian section which runs along the length of East Terrace.

In the original survey, areas also had been allocated to three other denominations - Episcopalian (Anglican), Catholic and Wesleyan religions. Other areas for Baptist and 'Other' burials were added.

The discovery of gold leads in the mid-1850s saw large numbers of diggers and their families, most from overseas countries, coming to Buninyong and surrounding districts.

Many deaths came about from mining accidents or contagious diseases. Examples of men killed in mining accidents can be seen at Presbyterian 28 and 78 and at Wesley 76.

Graves (such as Episcopalian 518 in which eight infant children from the one family are buried) also bear testimony to the large numbers of still-born, infant and young children buried here, and to the hardships suffered by the many women who died in childbirth or from disease.

With sizeable numbers of Chinese miners and market gardeners coming to the Buninyong goldfields, a small section of the cemetery (along North Terrace) was allocated for Chinese burials.

Some 24 persons are buried there with a few marker stones (at the foot not the head of the grave) still visible. Most had walked some 450km from the seaport of Robe in South Australia to reach the local goldfields.

Much of the planting in the cemetery occurred in the 1873-74 period when the local nurseryman Francis Moss donated many plants to the cemetery. Other plants were donated by Mr Innes, Mr Clark and Mr Biddle.

A report in the Buninyong Telegraph of 22 October 1873 gave great praise to the sexton of that time, a Mr Bull. There were well-maintained flower beds, shrubs and trees along the main east-west roadway (now North Terrace). Elms and willows had been planted alternatively along the banks of the creek

From 1919 to 1950 the sexton was Mr McPherson who grew daffodils for sale and display in the then empty western section. Evidence of their planting can still be seen in Spring with patches of colourful flowers appearing in many areas.

Just a few metres along the entrance driveway (on the right hand side), are two small markers. The first records the work of Joseph Henry Parkinson who was the sexton for 20 years until 1968 (although he is buried elsewhere). The second is the memorial stone and epitaph of N E Mackiewicz-Taygin, a composer and writer who rests in this shady treed setting.

Across the Midland Highway, looking north from the cemetery, are some small hills near/ on which gold was first discovered by Thomas Hiscock in 1851 and which sparked the gold rushes to this area and to Ballarat. Hiscock is buried in Episcopalian 743. It was also the site of the very large Imperial Gold Mine which gives its name to one of the cemetery's internal roads.

Some notable graves

Scattered through the old Memorial sections of this cemetery are many graves of historic or community interest. A project completed in 2022 saw green interpretative signage placed adjacent to 36 graves giving details of interest concerning the person or persons buried there. The numbers (1 to 36) on the map (right) match the graves in the list below and show their approximate location. The small numbers to be found at the corner of each section of the map also will be useful in finding these graves.

Buninyong Cemetery today

At the time of publication with some 55-60 burials each year, predominantly in its Lawn section, the Buninyong Cemetery is fast filling up its available capacity. Efforts to acquire additional land are still being made. The cemetery has three principal and discrete sections. In each, burials have a perpetual tenure.

THE MEMORIAL SECTION

This area was the originally surveyed part of the cemetery where for about 120 years almost all burials took place. It is bounded by North, East and South Terraces and Centre Road. In 2022, there were 4777 'denominational' plots with about 1350 then vacant. Some 7150 persons are interred there. There is also a small Chinese section of 44 plots. Restoration/improvement works there will soon start.

THE LAWN SECTION

At the western side of the cemetery there are two main Lawn areas divided by Imperial Road (named after the large Imperial Gold Mine which was on the hillock opposite the main gate). The first section, opened in 1970, has 1115 plots with only 20 remaining for purchase.

The newer Lawn area, east of Imperial Road, has 570 plots with some 475 currently available for future burials. The Lawn area presently has had 1800 burials and is now the preferred area for most burials.

THE MEMORIAL ASH GARDEN

Situated along the creek which meanders through the lower area of the cemetery are six garden beds divided into plots where ashes of persons who have been cremated are interred. There are 240 plots with some 75 available. Presently, the ashes of 235 persons are buried there.

THE DELL OF MEMORIES

This secluded and peaceful area with its trees and rockpools was developed in 2018 following requests from local persons, with loved ones buried or whose ashes were spread elsewhere, wanting a place to come to grieve or reflect. Plaques are placed on large 'memorial' rocks there

Cemetery records and website

The Buninyong Cemetery's website, to be found at buninyongcemetery.com.au, contains detailed information about many aspects of the cemetery, its history, operational rules and policies, costs of various services, and now the location and records of people buried there.

A major recent project has put into an accessible computer listing, the burial records of more than 9300 persons buried at the Buninyong Cemetery since 1852. These have been drawn from old record books, ledgers, out-dated computer files, and other paper records.

To access the records of any individual thought to be buried at the Buninyong Cemetery follow these steps

1. Go to the cemetery website – www.buninyongcemetery.com.au
2. Under the History tab, select Cemetery Records, and then follow the 'Click here' link.
3. After selecting Buninyong Cemetery at the top left, then, in the box at top right key in the surname of the person of interest. Then press SEARCH. All burials with that surname will be shown, together with plot details and (usually) other information such as dates of birth, death and burial.
4. To the right of this information is a small 'View' button which will show an aerial view of the approximate location of the grave.

While great care has been taken in the compilation of these records, should research by an individual show any inaccuracies, please advise the Cemetery Trust (buninyongcemetery@gmail.com) of this.

Two helpful publications – an eight-page General Information Booklet and a detailed Burial Booklet – also are to be found on the web-site.

Questions and answers

How do I find out what sites are vacant or available and how do I purchase one?

The Secretary of the Trust holds and maintains 'plot' books in which details of every burial and available sites can be found. Most persons wish to see a possible site's location within the cemetery, and so a meeting will be arranged there.

To obtain/reserve a site, full payment for a Right of Interment must be made. This right enables the burial of one or two persons in that site.

What does it cost to be buried at Buninyong?

In 2022 the costs of a gravesite in the various sections were – Lawn $1085, Memorial $845, and Ash Gardens $545.

At the time of any burial, in addition to fees charged by the Funeral Director and the grave digger there is a Burial Administration Fee currently $555 in the Lawn or Memorial sections, and $185 in the Ash Gardens. These fees are indexed by a Government-determined CPI amount each year.

Who is responsible for the maintenance of a gravesite?

In the Lawn, Ash Garden, and Dell of Memories sections, the Trust is responsible for the upkeep of gravesites and surrounds. In the 'memorial' (denominational) section, families or the holders of the Right of Interment are responsible for the upkeep, safety and repair of grave-sites, headstones and monuments.

For how long do burial rights for a grave site continue?

In some cemeteries, rights only continue for 25 years or some other specified period. At this cemetery rights are for perpetuity.

How is the cemetery administered and funded?

A Cemetery Trust comprised of voluntary, honorary community members is appointed for five-year terms by the Minister for Health.

The Trust is a not-for-profit organisation, without Government funding. Its operations are funded through the 'sale' of gravesites and other charges associated with burials. A listing of present Trust members can be found on the website.

Buninyong Cemetery Trust

The Trust has developed a comprehensive website – www.buninyongcemetery.com.au. Included there are details of history, cemetery rules and policies, maps, application forms, details of headstones, selected cemetery records, and full contact details. A small booklet – Burial at the Buninyong Cemetery - is available on-line or in hard copy on request.

As all cemetery administrative duties are carried out by volunteers, immediate contact may not always be possible. However, messages left on email or phone are responded to within a short time.

Buninyong & District Historical Society

The Buninyong & District Historical Society (BDHS) has an enviable record of undertaking research about local historical events, organisations, and people, and in holding and preserving important local records and documents.

The BDHS has played an important role in providing much of the information about the persons whose gravesites have green Notable Grave signage adjacent.

The group and its records (including old Cemetery volumes) and memorabilia are based in the well-preserved Old Court House (1884), a wing of the historic Buninyong Town Hall complex in Learmonth Street, Buninyong. BDHS members are present at the Old Court House on the third Saturday of each month between 9.30am and 1.30pm

Buninyong Old Library Trust

Members of this group and other volunteers are present at the Old Library (1855) building located at 408 Warrenheip Street (opposite the Post-Office) on Tuesdays to Sundays between about 10.00am and 3.00pm. It is, in essence, the Buninyong Information Centre, and also has many local historical records, photographs, visitor guides, articles, books, newspaper cuttings and other memorabilia. Many books, postcards and pamphlets on Buninyong are available for sale.

The Notable Graves project detailed on pages 6-7 of this booklet was a 2022 co-operative project of the Buninyong Cemetery Trust and The Buninyong & District Historical Society. A major funding grant to support the project came from the Buninyong Mount Helen Lions Club.

A grant from the Community Bank Buninyong funded the production of this brochure and enabled it to be distributed at no cost to interested persons.
